

Documentaries

A documentary is a special kind of show or movie that's a bit different from the regular stuff you see. It's like a window to the real world, where you can learn a lot of interesting things about people, places, and all sorts of stuff!

In a documentary, you don't meet made-up characters like in cartoons or sitcoms. Instead, you meet real people and learn about their lives, their adventures, and the things they do. You also get to explore amazing places, like the deep ocean, dense jungles, or even faraway countries, without leaving your home.

What makes documentaries exciting is that they are like educational adventures. They can teach you about animals, history, science, and so much more! For example, you might watch a documentary about how animals live in the wild, how ancient Egyptians built the pyramids, or how astronauts go to space. It's like going on a journey of learning and discovery.

The best thing about documentaries is that there's something for everyone. Whether you like animals, history, space, or even cooking, there's a documentary out there for you. They come in different shapes and sizes, just like your favorite toys or books.

The audience for documentaries includes people of all ages. Families can watch them together, and kids, parents, and grandparents can all learn something new and exciting. If you're curious about the world and love discovering new things, you might really enjoy watching documentaries!

Questions:

1. Identify a documentary that you have watched and explain what you enjoyed about it.
2. In your own words, explain what a documentary is.
3. List 5 things that would make a documentary enjoyable for you to watch.
4. List 4 things you would like to see a documentary about.